SHORT ANSWER (30 minutes suggested time each, 25% of final exam each) Choose 2 of the 4 questions below. Clearly indicate which you are answering.

- 1) Indigenous peoples in Canada have been, and continue to be, differentially affected by the criminal justice system in multiple ways. With reference to specific examples from course materials and lectures, discuss the ways in which Indigenous peoples have been, and continue to be, over- and under-policed and how this relates to settler colonialism.
- 2) Should The Indian Act be abolished? Why or why not? What would a post-Indian Act commitment to reconciliation or decolonization look like?
- To what extent is Canada presently complying with the *United Nations*Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples? Refer to specific rights and examples from the course materials/lectures in your response. Be sure to include instances of both compliance and non-compliance.
- 4) Indigenous peoples continue to challenge settler laws and policies using a variety of methods. Discuss the range of methods that demonstrate this resistance and the resurgence of Indigenous law. Refer to specific examples from course materials/lectures.

REFLECTIVE WRITING (60 minutes suggested time, 50% of final exam) Choose 1 of 2 questions below. Clearly indicate which you are answering.

- Indigenous legal scholar Val Napoleon has written: "Basically, how we think about law is shaped by our experiences and history. As Indigenous peoples, much of our current understanding of law derives from our experiences with the western legal system in Canada. We know this system through its courts, legislation, and enforcement, and by its treatment of our peoples, lands, and resources. Given this, many Indigenous peoples have come to associate 'law' with power, punishment, hierarchy, and bureaucracy." Reflect upon this passage by considering the ways in which the colonial legal system has given rise to this perspective of Canadian law among Indigenous peoples. What counter narratives do Indigenous legal systems provide?
- In her article "Reconciliation and Ethical Lawyering: Some Thoughts on Cultural Competence", Pooja Parma writes that "self-awareness is increasingly seen as an essential component of cultural competence training." Reflect on the ways in which this course has contributed to self-awareness of your position within the colonial legal system and your potential to be part of reconciliation or decolonization.
